Description:

Follow one rip-roarious day in the life of an antsy (if lovable) boy named Bug, guided by E. S. Redmond's humor and wit.If seven-year-old Benjamin (aka Bug) Blonsky were a superhero, he'd be "Bug Boy with the Power to Annoy." That's what his big sister says. Mom says he's wiggly and can't sit still. Dad says he's easily distracted. On this day, Bug's "choices" — drawing pictures of pig roller coasters during math time, making armpit noises when his teacher bends over — have landed him in a heap of trouble, so now he's writing a list of what not to do: his list of don'ts. Such as: don't be late for the bus (you'll have to sit with know-it-all Abner), don't trade a cookie for a flaxseed muffin (it wont taste like cotton candy), don't be nice to Peggy Pinkerton (she'll want to kiss you), and whatever happens, don't tell Mom! Bug's list is very long, but will it help him stay out of trouble? Don't count on it!

It has been a long time since we've found a book both parents and kids thoroughly loved. It is refreshing, well drawn, and so funny. Bug is a very relatable character for wiggly kids —and wiggly parents. The drawings are fantastic - my daughter especially loved the little french bulldog, Bug's loyal sidekick. Highly recommend! Guaranteed to be a classic one day (and hopefully the first of many books about Bug!).
